Minneapolis letter writes, "You or I would be ostracised for a tithe of the wickedness of which the ex-Queen is guilty." Ostracised! Is there one of them that ever refused, for himself or his daughters, invitations to sit at the Queen's table, even to the very eve of the revolution? And when I went to the opening service of the Central Union Church last December, at which both the authors of these letters and the Rev. Severo Bishop took part, was I not told that there was only one seat unoccupied, namely, the pew reserved for the Queen? That is a strange form of ostracism, which condones in a queen what it denounces in a fugitive. I have no means of knowing whether these charges against the Queen are true or false; but no whisper of the charge of idolatry had reached my ear when the revolution occurred, and nothing in the public or private life of the Queen is known to me, that could justify the other charges. Moreover, those who make these charges must have known as much about them when they condoned them, as they do now that they seek to make political capital out of them. The public of Minneapolis have been informed that I dearly love position, and I am afraid this is true, for I am proud and thankful to-day, to know that I have not had one selfish thought, nor spoken one dishonorable word, nor grudging either time or effort in my determination that my name should not be amongst those whose reputations will have found their grave in this year's history. This is a position which I am not ashamed to cover.

It is heart-breaking to think of the names that have been lowered by mistaken statesmanship in this miserable broil, and so much of it is done under cover of scriptural quotations. Minneapolis readers are informed that I do not believe the whole of the Bible, and that I would omit the inspired statement, "Though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished." Sir, I fully believe that text to be true, but I am not sure that the description "the wicked" was intended particularly to apply to the sovereign or nation of Hawaii, to the exclusion of white men. In the fifth verse of a subsequent chapter by the same sacred writer (Solomon) I find that those who are "glad at calamities shall not go unpunished," and when I read of the exultation over the prostrate form of Hawaii, and the attempted violation of her nationality, I am tempted to ask who have joined hand in hand? and who have been glad at her calamities?

One is generally accustomed to look for the instruments of the Divine displeasure amongst the Philistines and frogs, and fiery serpents; I have never wished to associate myself with the scourges of the unmaking, but have rather taken rest and refuge in the words of Him who said with His own loving lips, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." Truly the wicked shall not go unpunished, but—"Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord." Are the Minneapolis readers to understand that annexation was adopted as a means of punishing "the wicked"? This is surely strange doctrine for Christian annexationists to advance.

Finally, in this connection let me refer to the sentence pronounced against those Israelites who violated the treaty which Joshua had made with the Gibeonites. The Gibeonites had obtained the treaty by fraud, and it became very inconvenient to the chosen people to keep it, but they had to learn at a terrible cost what a sacred thing a treaty is. (This may be profitably studied in 2 Samuel, 21st chapter, 2nd verse.)

But, sir, I do not want to indulge in recrimination. I want to work for peace and quiet. This could have been secured at the outset by honest compromise with the Queen, who would probably have consented to abdicate then, to secure the throne for her race. As I then urged the Commission at Washington, they might have secured a new constitution and a new Sovereign with intelligent control. I do not know that the Queen's abdication is either attainable or desirable now, and I am sure the succession of Princess Kaiulani would be most undesirable under such conditions of heat and contention as now exist. On the other hand there can be no Government worth the name, which is not based on content without bayonets. Is there any promise of such content in Hawaii now?

The United States will surely not embroil themselves in the present content, and what is the end to be? Will reasonable men on both sides honestly work for peace, even at the cost of some self-denial, and acknowledgment of past errors?

I am convinced that compromise and peace are possible, and that the tendency to disorder will grow rapidly unless some avenue of peace can be opened.

Two things are essential; the Hawaiian national instinct must be satisfied, the confidence of white men must be maintained; and let me add—the honor of treaty powers must be recognized.

All this can be done if men—and women also—will be by-gones, and will be satisfied with securing guarantees for the future.

If I have one ambition in connection with Hawaii, it is to help forward such a consummation. I am, sir, your obedient servant, T. H. DAVIES. Sundown, Hekesh Park, Southport, July 15, 1893.

Trusts and Combinations Are unpopular. But there is one form of trust against which no one has anything to say. That is the trust which the public reposes in Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the best of it is the trust is fully justified by the merit of the medicine. For, remember, Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures.

The German Situation.

George W. Smalley in one of his letters from Berlin to the New York Tribune quotes a remark made to him by a "student of German politics"—evidently a German—which is significant in view of the result of the elections. "No doubt," says this student, "the emperor is a danger to Germany, and socialism is a danger. But, on the whole, socialism is a greater danger than the emperor. It is agreed that this was the way in which the situation shaped itself in the minds of thousands of voters. There are numerous democrats in Germany, and numerous others who anticipate and desire as large a measure of popular power in the government as in England. The large majority of Germans, outside of the privileged classes and the clericals, hold these opinions to a greater or less extent. But all democrats are not socialists, and all believers in popular government do not aim at the overthrow of existing social institutions. Accordingly these democrats not only cut loose from the socialists in elections, but made the choice which Smalley's student made, and decided to back the emperor, army bill and all, a while longer, rather than give the socialists too much power.

It gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine we handle, and as a seller it leads all other preparations on this market." For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., agents for the Hawaiian Islands.

Some of the newspapers are speaking of the United States as having the double monetary standard. On the contrary, it has the single gold standard. Silver is bought only in terms of the standard, and the silver dollar issued, although an unlimited legal tender, occupies precisely the same position as the greenback, which is also an unlimited legal tender.—Springfield Republican.
